FEATURING

Working with the Self Injury Hidden in Your Practice: Resources for Clinicians
Angela Kahn, MFT

Despite the growing prevalence of self-injury, it is often misunderstood but self-injury is a special area of suffering, deserving of its own careful treatment. Learn to recognize and identify the signs of self-injury as well as the different “danger levels”—and to differentiate these from suicidal gestures. Discover new ways to begin a difficult conversation in a safe, nurturing, and non-threatening way. Find out what you can do to help your clients, or those with friends, loved ones, co-workers or students who self injure.

Angela Kahn, MFT is in private practice in West Hollywood where she specializes in the treatment of self-injury. Angela has worked extensively with this population in private practice, in agency and clinic settings, has trained students, interns, and licensed professionals, and is presenting at the 2010 CAMFT Annual Conference. Her website is www.angelakahn.com
